FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

On this Mother's Day, we are invited to pause and contemplate one of the profound and beautiful mysteries woven into the fabric of creation: the vocation of motherhood. In a culture that often measures worth by productivity or achievement, we are reminded today that the deepest truths of human life are revealed not in power, but in self-gift. At the heart of the Christian story stands a mother. Mary of Nazareth, in her humble "yes" to God, becomes the very model of what it means to receive life and give it away in love. Her openness allowed the Word to become flesh; her fidelity sustained her through both the joy of Bethlehem and the sorrow of Calvary.

In her, we see that motherhood is not merely biological, it is profoundly spiritual. It is a participation in God's own creative and redemptive love. Every mother, in her own way, shares this mystery. Whether through the raising of children, the quiet sacrifices made daily, or the hidden prayers offered for those entrusted to her care, a mother images the love of God. This love is not abstract or distant; it is patient, attentive, and often costly. It is the kind of love that forms souls. We also recognize that Mother's Day can carry a range of emotions. For some, it is a day of joy and gratitude; for others, it may be marked by loss, longing, or difficulty. The Church holds all of these experiences in her heart today. We pray for mothers who have gone before us, for those who struggle, for those who desire to be mothers, and for those who have taken on maternal roles in ways seen and unseen. In the end, Mother's Day draws us back to the central truth of our faith: that love is the meaning of life, and that love is most fully revealed in self-gift. Today, we give thanks for the women who have embodied this truth for us. May we honor them not only with words, but by striving to live lives shaped by the same generous and faithful love. Happy Mother's Day. Fr. Scott Morgan

NOTES FROM FR. ADAM

HOW TO MAKE A MORAL DECISION PART III: the principles or sources of morality.

St. Thomas lists the following as principles or sources of morality:

1.) The Object; 2.) The Circumstances of the Act; 3.) Its Purpose (The Intention)

We have covered the Object & the Circumstances. This week we will cover the Purpose of a moral act.

§ 3. The End or Motive

Our discussion is confined to the subjective end or end intended by the agent; we shall not consider the end of the act itself since this is identical with the moral object already discussed in no. 1.

FIRST PRINCIPLE. The moral character of an act depends also on the motive of the agent (the subjective end).

The reason for this is that the end or motive of the agent may have its own moral character in reference to the eternal law and right reason, by being opposed or conformed to them.

SECOND PRINCIPLE. The motive of the agent a) may change an indifferent act in the abstract into a good or evil act; b) may increase or diminish the goodness of an act, and even make it evil; c) may increase or diminish the evil of an act; d) but it is never able to make an evil act good.

With regard to a): walking if viewed in the abstract is morally indifferent, but if performed for a good motive, eg., from obedience, it is morally good, whereas if it is done from an evil motive, e.g., from a desire to satisfy a blameworthy curiosity, it becomes morally evil.

With regard to b): the object of the act of almsgiving is good and its goodness is increased if the act is done in fulfillment of a vow. If vanity enters as a partial motive, the act loses some of its goodness, whereas if vanity becomes the chief motive, the act is evil. Some theologians used to teach that an evil motive always vitiated the entire goodness of an act, but today it is generally admitted that if the evil motive is a partial and incomplete motive, it is certainly evil in itself but nevertheless there remains some goodness in an act whose object is good. For if a slight evil in the motive were sufficient to destroy completely the goodness of an act which was good in other respects, could we ever perform a good act? Therefore, it must be admitted that one and the same act may be good under one aspect, bad under another – that is to say, good by reason of its object, bad by reason of its circumstances or motive, provided however that the evil motive is not the adequate cause of the act.

With regard to c): the man who steals to obtain sufficient money to get drunk sins more grievously than if he were only to steal, whereas the man who steals in order to be able to give alms sins less grievously, although the sin remains because of the evil in the act arising from the evil nature of the moral object.

With regard to d): a good motive can never justify the use of evil means. And thus St. Paul gives the warning: Let us not do evil that there may come good (see Rom 3:8). The intrinsic reason for this is that the evil character of the act arising from the object is so opposed to right reason that it cannot be altered by any external motive.

THIRD PRINCIPLE. In all his actions man must put before himself some good motive which is related to God at least implicitly; under no circumstances may he act for pleasure alone.

In this principle lies the answer to the question: What sort of intention does the agent require in order that his acts may be good? The doctrine proposed steers a middle course between two extremes, one of which demands from man an actual or at least virtual reference of his acts to God, the other maintaining that for an act to be good all that is necessary is that nothing be done contrary to right reason, without any other intention being necessary. That at least an implicit reference of human acts to God is necessary follows from those condemned propositions in which it is asserted that it is perfectly lawful to act for pleasure alone:

"There is no sin in eating and drinking to excess merely for the sake of pleasure, provided that there is no injury to health, since it is lawful for the natural appetite to take enjoyment in its own acts." St. Thomas had already taught: "Pleasure exists for the sake of action and not vice-versa." There is certainly nothing wrong in experiencing pleasure while acting but it is never good to act for pleasure alone. An actual or virtual reference of human acts to God cannot be required since nowhere is there to be found such a rigid precept. In practice men should be advised to refer their acts to God as frequently as possible, but those who follow right reason in all their acts must be considered to possess a right intention.

(Dominic M. Prümmer, Handbook of Moral Theology, pg. 27-28.)

Dear Pastor, Parochial Vicar, Staff, and my dear beloved Parishioners, I hope this letter finds you all well in Christ! With a grateful heart, I write to you as I prepare to continue my priestly ministry in your (our) parish as your Parochial Vicar.

Thank you for your warm welcome; it already speaks volumes of your faith and kindness. I wish to express my deep gratitude to Fr. Scott Morgan, who has faithfully shepherded our communities with love, vision, and dedication, and of course to Fr. Adam Lewis. I am well aware of the marvelous work they have done, and I am honored and excited to be part of the strong foundation they have laid. Transitions are never easy; for both priests and parishioners, there is a sense of leaving and beginning again. But in these moments, we are reminded that God is the one writing the larger story – and His plans are always for our good (cf. Romans 8:28). I come to you not with all the answers, but with an open heart, ready to listen, learn, and serve the Lord and you with humility and joy.

To introduce myself: my name is Fr. Masilamani Suvakkin, known as Fr. Masi. In my native Indian language "Masilamani" means "innocent" (referencing the December 28th feast day). Suvakkin is my father's name, which is common to use as a last name in my state; it is the name for St. Joachim, the father of the Blessed Virgin Mary. I have six brothers (seven of us total), all of whom are practicing Catholics, following the tradition of our late parents, Mr. Suvakkin and Mrs. Selvamary. I was born in Tamil Nadu, a southern state in India where St. Thomas the Apostle preached and was later martyred.

I was born on February 14, 1966, and ordained on December 28, 2001. Following my ordination, I served in a minor seminary for two years and in the Archdiocese of Cape Town, South Africa, for three years. In May 2006, I arrived in the Diocese of Owensboro, KY. After a one-year break, I joined the Diocese of Great Falls-Billings, MT, on July 15, 2013. I have been serving as a pastor for approximately 13 years, and as I enter my 25th year of priesthood, I am proud to be a citizen of this country. As your new Parochial Vicar, I desire only this: that Christ be at the center of everything we do – our liturgy, our ministries, our families, and our service to the world. I am thrilled to make my home among you starting July 1st, 2026. My primary goal is to get to know you and learn what makes our community so special.

Please know that I am already praying for each of you. I ask for your prayers in return as I begin this new chapter. God bless you and your families.

Sincerely in the Lord, Fr. Masi
